

The new Spanish Gambling Act

The Spanish parliament recently passed the new Gambling Act, which finally establishes a regulatory framework for operating online gaming activities. Under this new Act, gaming companies will have clear rules for operating and advertising in Spain, and those aiming to operate in one of the most relevant markets in Europe will need a clear picture of this new regulatory landscape.

The session will cover the most relevant features of the new Act, including the licensing system, the requirements under the new regime, the applicable tax regime, and the likely timeframe in which the Spanish authorities will have the new regulatory framework fully in force.

CHAIR

Íñigo Rubio

Íñigo is a partner in the firm's finance practice in the London office. He has extensive experience in advising on structured finance, project finance, corporate and asset financing, the financing of public infrastructure projects, domestic and international leveraged buyouts (LBOs) and management buyouts (MBOs), and venture capital.

SPEAKER
